Our production manager, Cindy Lair, first started at Schacht assembling the Matchless wheels. Over the last 25 years, Cindy has gained a lot of spinning wheel knowledge and know-how. She has also developed a near cult following for her ability to help spinners solve their spinning wheel problems. Cindy, in Interweave's new DVD, "Know Your Wheel", shares her knowledge gleaned from years of hands-on experience.

New videos Show You How!

Check out our new Wolf Loom Videos on YouTube! We've made it easier to set up your new loom with "Assembling the Baby Wolf" (it's the same for the Mighty Wolf), from installing the tie-up cords and aprons, to instructions on folding and unfolding! Our "Installing your Baby Stroller" makes adding a stroller to your Baby or Mighty Wolf super easy.

Now, when you need to replace either your brake cable or brake drum, you can refer to our "Replacing Your Brake Cable and Brake Drum" video. Though this video specifically addresses the Wolf Looms, the process is similar to that of our Standard Floor Loom as well.

Also on YouTube: All about the Sidekick, three videos introduce, explain and explore everything you want to know about our new folding travel spinning wheel.

A Project

Dibby Dabs Scarf

Designed and Woven by Jane Patrick

Project Notes

This stash-busting project is the perfect way to weave up something beautiful from all of the bits left over from your knitting and weaving projects. Start by gathering up your odds and ends and sorting them by colorways. Don't be afraid of different textures or fibers. Choose a dominant color and then throw in an accent, such as a color on the opposite side of the color wheel.

To prepare your warp, decide on a sett and the width of your warp to determine the total number of warp ends. Then, measure one yarn at a time on your warping board. Measure until all of that yarn is gone or until you feel that you have enough of any given yarn. I leave all of the different yarns on the warping board, remove them altogether, and then sley them randomly in the reed. This is an intuitive process—I love to mix and match colors and textures.

A few guidelines to keep in mind: spread each yarn across the reed without placing any yarn next to itself; place highly textured or thicker yarns in the slots of your reed where they'll have more room. After the heddle is threaded and you start to wind on, you'll find that the warp threads in front of the heddle are criss-crossed. You can untangle them as you wind on. If you feel resistance when winding, stop and give the warp a shake and comb.

To choose the right weft, I suggest that you try a few different yarns first to see what color is going to work the best. For this scarf, I discovered (with some suggestions from my Cricket Clubbers) that the lavender weft looked the best—which was a surprise.

These are some of the dibby dabs I used: Trendsetter Yarn's Pandora and Dune, Berroco's Bonsai, Inca Gold, and Ultra Alpaca—all in shades of blue and green with accents of red and gold metallic. The weft, which ties it all together, is Brown Sheep's Nature Spun in a medium lavender.

Structure Plain weave.

I wove this on the Cricket Loom, but you could weave this project on any rigid heddle loom, or on a floor loom.
